Arrangements Completed for Exhibit.
Arrangements have been completed for the art exhibit to be given by the City Federation of Women's clubs the first week in December.

The purpose of this exhibit is to place in the hands of the federation means with which they can accomplish some civic and charitable work in the city. The treasury of the federation has been in a depleted condition for some time and it has been impossible for the members to co-operate with the various other organizations in dispensing aid to those in need. The members of the federation have expressed the desire to assist in the work of the city in which such organizations can take a hand. The individual clubs will receive no benefit from the proceeds of the exhibit.

Over three hundred pictures, including masterpieces of note, will be on exhibition. Each of the six clubs

The sheriff's office falls far short of paying for itself, as shown by the fact that the fees collected amount to but $1,868.95, while on the 30 per cent basis would entitle him to but $560.41 to pay for office assistance. HEART AND HOME TALKS BY BARBARA BOYD

Living Fully or in Patches.

G. WELLS, the novelist, in one of his books, makes a character remark, "We live life in patches. We eat. We sleep. We take exercise. We do this and we do that, just to keep our physical machinery going. And we call it living."

Evidently, the speaker is much disgusted with the accepted notion of life. And, if we stop to think of it, living life on such a plane as this, does, for a being of intelligence and fine sensibilities, seem hardly worth while. Yet, when we get down to the real facts of the case, a good many of us do live in this way. We throw in a little work or a little play, which, however, is all for our own advantage or aggrandizement, and the days pass, and the weeks pass, and the years pass, and we eat and sleep and exercise and make life a patchwork of such things, just as the writer says.

It is a very material plane to live on. But many of us live on it and never glance beyond. We look about and see every one else living this way, and so we slip into the routine; and, though sometimes we wonder if the game is worth the candle, still we keep in step with the procession.

But let's consider a moment if we need to live in patches, if life cannot yield us something more than this sort of existence? What is the real life? These material things, we know will pass away. They belong to the temporal and destructible. But are there not some things that are indestructible, some things which, though we cannot see them with our eyes, or touch them with our fingers, still are real and cannot be destroyed? And if there are such, and we live in them, will we not then live a real life, a life that is indestructible and a life that is worth while?

And are there not such realities in the form of the things of the spirit—love, kindness, gentleness, tenderness, honor, truth? We cannot place our hand on some substantial material object and say this is love, or honor or truth. But nevertheless, we know these things exist, that they are real. And if all the material things were swept away, if food and houses and clothing, even if the world itself were destroyed, still the idea of love, of good, of truth, would remain untouched, unchanged, as real and vital as it ever was.

If we want to live the real life then, do we not want to live in these things, to get into an atmosphere where these reign, to bring them into our life and experience as the predominating influence, rather than food and sleep and exercise. We may go through these material processes of living, but we can go through them almost mechanically. Our body can perform the function on this lower plane, so to speak, of its own volition. But our real self, our higher self, the spirit that is the reality within us, can concern itself with the realities of life, can live in this atmosphere of what is true and real and indestructible. And if we do this, we will not have that sensation of living in patches, that feeling that in it worth while to exist to eat and sleep and take exercise, and go through such a booting grind. Might it not make life a more beautiful and purposeful thing for some of us, if we would think upon this a bit.

THIS BEESNESS MAHAHEEMSEEK

Joseph Garifo Says He Doesn't Like Rocks Thrown Through Window.

Can't Understand Playfulness of His Countryman, Lamonica.

John Cramer Swears Out Warrant For Oakley Miller.

Another charge has been laid at the door of James Lamonica, alias James Garvido, an Italian laborer formerly employed by the Erie railroad. Besides being wanted for malicious destruction of property, Lamonica is wanted by the Erie officials for thefts which have been committed at the Erie transfer.

Joseph Garifo, of East Center street who preferred the charge of destruction of property against his countryman, reported to the police this morning that Lamonica paid his home another visit last night and hurled a stone through another window.

"This beesness makes me sick," Garifo informed the police and he wanted the practice stopped immediately. The police have not been able to locate Lamonica, who is in hiding.

Yesterday afternoon Chief of Police Klinefelter received a message from the police at Mansfield, asking him to locate D. C. Edwards. It is said that Edwards passed a worthless check in Mansfield and started for Marion yesterday morning. His description was furnished the local authorities but he could not be found in Marion.

John Cramer, who was knocked senseless in a fight which occurred on North Main street Saturday evening, that appeared at police headquarters this morning and filed an affidavit against Oakley Miller, of Home street. The affidavit charges Miller with fighting and disorderly conduct.

The police attempted to locate Miller today but were not successful. It is thought that he has left the city.
